Dear Year 11 and 13 Students and Parents

Following on from my Head of School Update sent out earlier on today, we have now received further guidance from Ofqual regarding how students' current level of achievement in individual subjects will be recognised by the exam boards.

Before we go into the weekend, I wanted to share with you the letter that Ofqual have written for all students to read. There isn't anything new from what I have previously shared with you.

If students have recently submitted NEA work, the quality of this work will be used to influence the grade that teachers award.

Ofqual have shared very clearly that data cannot be discussed with individual students, so I remind you again, please refrain from contacting individual teachers regarding your grades.

I will write to you again next week outlining the actions that we will be taking as a school to ensure that your achievements are shared accurately, fairly and consistently.

Kind regards

Sally Ambrose
Head of School
